- The question form is often Have you ever ...?(= in your life?) Have you ever been to Paris?
- The present perfect is not used with past time words (last night, yesterday, in 1984, etc). It is not possible to say I've seen him yesterday.

57 The imperative

USE

• To give orders and instructions:

Stop!

Don't go!

Turn left at the traffic lights and then turn right.

FORM

• The imperative has the same form as the infinitive: Wait!

The negative is formed by adding don't:

Don't wait!

Don't stop!

Notes

• The imperative is used to give instructions in the second person, i.e. (You) wait. The form is the same for the singular and the plural.

Let's is a kind of imperative for we: Let's go. Let's not wait. (Note the negative.)

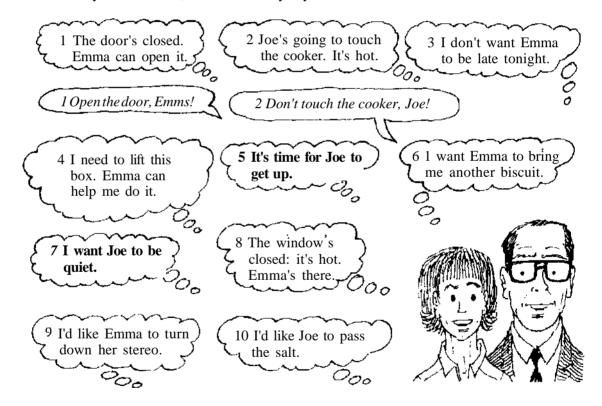

The imperative is not always very polite. It is more polite to say Could I have ... or Would you ...
 Cina we some bread * Could I have wine bread please?

Give me some bread —* Could I have wine bread, please? Open the door -> Would you open the door, please?

• The imperative may sometimes be used for requests to people we know well, or for orders given by people in authority. It is often used when speaking to children or soldiers.

Practice

Mr and Mrs Brownridge are talking to their children, Joe and Emma. In your notebook, write what they say.

Conditionals

There are three main types of conditional. These are usually described as the first, second and third conditionals.

58 The first conditional

if + present simple future
  If you drop it,
                           it'll break.
  If you come at ten,
                           we'll be ready.
                          I'll pick you up at the park.
  If you phone me,
or future
                           if + present simple It'll break
                           if you drop it.
  We'll be ready
                          if you come at ten.
  I'll pick you up later
                          if you phone me.

USE

• The first conditional refers to the future. It is used when there is a possibility that the if-event might happen.

```
If it rains, we'll go to the cinema. (= It might rain: it might not)

If the sun shines, we'll go to the beach. [ = The sun might shine: it might not)
```

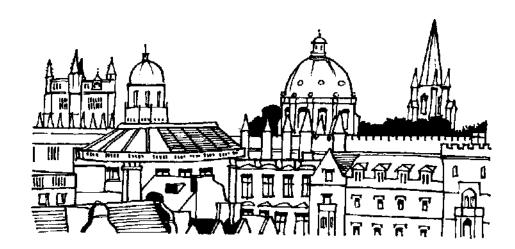

Note: going to is sometimes used in the first conditional to describe a future plan: If it rains, we're going to visit my mother.

Practice

Write these sentences, putting the verbs in brackets into the present simple or the future simple.

- 1 If the train's late, we (walk). if the train's late, well walk.

 If they asked me to work for them.
 If would do a lot of swimming.
 I might accept.
 if + past simple
 if I lived by the sea.
 if they asked me to work for them.

Notes

- The 'past' here is actually the subjunctive, which is the same as the past simple except for two forms I and he/she + were:
 If I were you, I'd change my job.
 If John were here, he wouldn't be very happy.
- In conventional English, these two forms can be replaced by the past:
 If I was you, I'd change my job.
 If John was here, he wouldn't be very happy.
- would is often shortened to 'd.

USE

- The second conditional refers to the present or future. The if-event is cither
 - a] hypothetical;

If I worked in that factory, I'd soon change things, (but I don't work in that factory)

If I spoke French, my job would be a lot easier, (but I don't speak French)

b) unlikely:

If she left her husband, she might be happier, (but T don't think she's going to leave her husband)

The children would be better swimmers if they (go) swimming more frequently. 8 I wouldn't mind having children if we (live) in the country. 9 If I (be) you, I wouldn't worry about going to university. 10 If I (have) any money, I'd give you some. 11 Your parents (be) a lot happier if you phoned them more often. 12 Where would you like to live if you (not live) in Paris? 13 What would you do if you suddenly (win) half a million pounds? 14 Would you mind if I (not give) you the money I owe you today? 15 If I had to go to hospital, (not go) to this one.

First and second conditional 60

CONTRAST

Some students get confused by the difference between the first and second conditional. Look at these two sentences;

- a) If she works harder, she'll pass her exams.
- b) If she worked harder, she'd pass her exams.

The difference between the two sentences can be found by asking the question, 'Is she going to work harder?' In sentence a) the answer is, 'Maybe - and maybe not'. The answer to sentence b) is, 'Probably not'. The difference is the idea in the speaker's mind of what is going to happen. The if-event in a first conditional sentence is more likely to happen than the if-event in a second conditional.

or present simple

if + present simple

USE

• If has the same meaning as when here.

The zero conditional is used:

a) for instructions:

> If you select reverse gear, the car goes backwards. If the camera is on, a red light appears.

for general truths: b)

> if he's got no money, he doesn't go oat. lie always says hello if he sees you.

Modals

'Modals' are the small verbs like can, must, and might, which give certain meanings to main verbs.

FORM

There are twelve modal verbs:

can	shall	must
could	should	ought to
may	will	need (to)
might	would	dare

• Positive is formed by putting the modal between the subject and the main verb:

We should stay. You ought to go. He might come.

• Negative is formed by adding not (or n't) after the modal:

We shouldn't stay. You ought not to come. He might not come.

• Questions are formed by changing the position of the modal and the subject:

```
Should we stay? Shouldn't we stay?
Ought you to go? Oughtn't yon to go?
Might he come? Mightn't he come?
```

Notes

- need can be needn't [modal form) or don't need to (verb form).
- Negative questions generally use n't. If not is used, there is a different word order: Shouldn't we stay? Should we not stay?

62 Using modals in questions and negatives

Practice

Rewrite these sentences as questions or negatives, according to the instruction given.

May 1? or May we? are used for polite requests, in the same way as Can 1? or Can we? (> Exercise 63). It is a very polite form:

May I ask you a question?

May I have a glass of water, please?

Notes

She was very ill last year but she has got over the illness now.

He takes after his father. He's got the same blonde hair and blue eyes and the same gentle manner.

She works in the mornings but she can't live off that. She must find a full-time job.

I came across an old photograph of you yesterday. It was taken when you were at school.

• Some phrasal verbs do not have the object between the verb and the particle. In these verbs, the verb and the particle cannot separate. They are inseparable. The object can only go after the verb and the particle:

I'd like to go out tonight. Can you look after the children? (to look after = to take care of someone or something)

verb particle object

We cannot say: Can you. look the children after?

- When the object is a pronoun, it goes after the phrasal verb in the same way: Can you. look after them?
- Examples of phrasal verbs that take an object but do not separate:

to get over = to recover from something, e.g. an illness, the death of a relative or friend, etc. That is, to get better after something bad happens to you to take after = to look or behave like a parent (or older relative) to live of f = to get money from something to pay for everything you need to live, e.g. food, clothes, transport, etc.

to come across = to find something or meet someone by chance
